Bodies of Americans Show They Were Drawn by Rope; Have No Bullet Wounds.

Carl Eck, William Bishop and William Spencer, the three Americans who were killed by filibusters at Chocolate Pass, Chih., a month ago, met their death by being dragged on the ground, according to an American who was present when the bodies were exhumed and who arrived in El Paso Thursday. No bullet wounds were found in any of the bodies.

According to the American evidence is shown by the conditions of the bodies that the three men were roped by the mounted filibusters and then dragged until killed. An examination of the body of Carl Eck, who was only 17 years old, disclosed the fact that many bones were broken and that the skull was crushed in. Broken bones and torn flesh was also discovered in the examination of the other two bodies.

All three of the bodies will be taken to Juarez this evening on the Mexico North Western train from Pearson, accompanied by P. E. Eck, of this city, the father of Carl Eck. Mr. Eck left for Chocolate Pass after hearing of the tragedy and discovered the graves of the three men.

Eck Funeral Sunday.

The body of Carl Eck will be taken to a local undertaking establishment and the funeral services will be held at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the chapel, 119 North Campbell street.

The deceased boy was born in Huntington, Pa., December 7, 1907. He later moved with his parents to Kansas City, Mo., thence to Naco, Ariz., and later to El Paso, where he was employed recently by the Tri-State Motor company. For the past three months he had been spending a vacation on a cattle ranch in Mexico.

He returned to El Paso for a short visit about a month ago and it was

MASSIVE WORK STAGGERED

Other Work at Elephant Butte Is Pushed; Quarry Force Is Increased.

BY E. H. BALDWIN.

Elephant Butte, N. M., Dec. 4.—On account of several reasons some unexpected and all unavoidable, masonry progress at the dam during the month has not been as good as during previous months. The main trouble was due to delay in receiving gate casting. The lack of which prevented work on certain blocks, restricting the area on which work could be done and thereby limiting the quantity of masonry that could be placed. This condition was enhanced by the weather, which considerably retarded the setting of the concrete and limits the height to which concrete can be poured against the form.

Crews Are Kept Busy. While the quantity placed was not as much as usual, advantage was taken of the adverse conditions to pour concrete in some of the out of the way places, which will be of great benefit to the project. The concrete is being placed by hand and consequently took more time.

In this way the apron below the service and sluice tunnels was built, also some grillage work at the entrance to the gates. This is all apron forced concrete, the fabrication of the steel requiring considerable labor and time; while the placing was quite rapid, the shoveling and careful spading, as compared with the ordinary procedure of dumping the full time the mason utilized the full time. The masonry crews. Even with the delay 25,500 cubic yards of concrete was placed during the month, making a total to date of 351,000 cubic yards.

Masonry work is now in progress from 10:30 a. m. to the west abutment. Sta. 10+95 at the west abutment. The block at west abutment has been brought up to elevation 4288.0 or 44 feet above the old river bed. With the exception of the flume and winter block all other blocks have been worked on. The highest block, nearly the height of the adjoining blocks.

Excavation Continued. Excavation has continued on both abutments and below the dam. A derick has been placed within 150 feet of the dam. The material is being excavated in its vicinity. At the eastern abutment excavation is in progress well up the slope towards the railroad. The fine material is being carried in wheelbarrows and dumped in the gully just below dam while the rock is being removed by derick. The derick and cars are dumped below apron to protect it from being undermined when water is passing through the dam.

The excavation crews have been increased by several crews from the quarry. Excavation for the month was 1700 cubic yards, making a total to date of 283,400 cubic yards.

Larger Force in Quarries. A larger force in the quarries has resulted in the accumulation of considerable rock, both for crusher and plant. The material is being great benefit later when the mixing plant is running at full capacity. The total output from the quarries for the month was 22,500 cubic yards, divided between sand and cement plant, crusher, plums and waste. From sand storage 8000 cubic yards was used, making a total to date of 50,300 cubic yards.

The sand cement plant operated without interruption most of the time with three shifts. During the month 15,000 barrels of sand cement were produced. A total to date of 255,300 barrels. A cement gun and core drill were in operation a part of the time.

Good Progress on Eagle Road. Excellent progress was made on the construction of the portion of Eagle road that is to replace the part that will be flooded. About 100 men are working on this feature, and while some of the work is difficult, mainly in solid rock, it is expected to be completed by the end of the year.

At the embankment a force of 80 men and 14 teams are making excellent progress, though at present the work is still in the preliminary stage. Camp Established. A camp has been established; water and electric lines for light and power have been put in. The excavation of the heel and toe of the dam is nearly completed, and the toe trench is partially filled with rock. The grouting of the dam is being completed. The grouting of the dam is being completed. The grouting of the dam is being completed.

RUSSIANS WIN FIGHT AT LODZ

Vast Armies Fighting in Flanders From Concealment; Other War News.

"There is nothing to report in Alsace."

ALLIED AIRMEN USING CAUTION

Paris, France, Dec. 4.—Airmen in the battle zone in France are compelled to keep to a considerable height in consequence of the accuracy of the fire from below. The military authorities have ordered them not to run any greater risks than are necessary, since each airman is a valuable asset, whose loss would be almost a calamity to the army to which he is attached.

Surveillance over the territory in which the fighting is under way becomes more strict every week. No one, whether soldier or civilian, is permitted to pass the sentinels at the entrance to or exit from villages and towns without a permit stamped by the military authorities. At every grade crossing, sentries are posted with orders of the most stringent kind to examine the papers of every person who attempts to pass. Any one who approaches rapidly is met with leveled bayonet at the muzzle of a loaded rifle.

Supply Convoy in Danger. At the Belgian frontier are approached, many of the roads are lined with gigantic convoys of supplies for the various brigades, divisions and army corps, who constantly are moving to fresh positions where the fighting is fiercest. On one village the traveler is warned by French sentry, east the next by a Belgian, and perhaps a mile on by a British soldier. All appear to be working with absolute harmony.

VAST ARMIES FIGHT BUT KEEP CONCEALED

In Flanders, Belgium, Dec. 2, via Paris, France, Dec. 4.—A visit to the trenches of the French in Flanders by a correspondent of the Associated Press under the auspices of the French general staff, is here described:

Standing in the shelter of a wonderfully ingenious and deep dug trench on what undoubtedly is the bloodiest battlefield in European history, the first and most notable impression of an observer is one of utter surprise at the absence of movement and the lack of noise. Within one's range of vision, with a strong field glass, there are probably concealed 100,000 men, yet, save for the French soldier with his rifle in his hand, standing or kneeling in the immediate vicinity and keenly peering over the flat land toward the position known to be held by the Germans, no human presence was noticeable.

A staff officer supplied the information that behind a slight rise in the ground 300 yards away many German guns were hidden from sight.

"STOCKYARDS CITY KEEPAGE"

J. D. Jackson Thinks There Is No Question About Unsanitary Feature.

Secretary, Cattle Raisers Association, Room No. 4, Sheldon Hotel.

Dear Sir:—Though not a cattiman, nor a resident of El Paso, except for the winter months, when I come here to escape the rigors of the climate of my home in the stockyards, I am deeply interested in the stockyards controversy which has been conducted through the columns of the El Paso newspapers for the past month. I refer to it as a "controversy" but it has been too much one-sided to come under that general head. I perceive that you have referred to it as a presentation of facts from the point of view of cattlemen interested in preventing the stockyards business from venturing under control of what your press agent seems to delight in calling "adverse interests."

Sanitary Reasons Good. It seems to me that your objections to the location of stockyards within the city limits on the ground that they are unsanitary are well based. Whether your objections on the ground that the stockyards are a "nuisance" or that the cattlemen are "interested" in the location of the stockyards is well based, I am not prepared to say. I do not know enough about the cattle business to be able to advance an opinion on that score.

Experience is Philadelphian. That there should be any doubt that stockyards and slaughter houses are unsanitary, I cannot understand. While I have never had the pleasure of living in a great packing center like Kansas City or Chicago, which figure so largely in your "controversy," I have read so much about the smells arising from the packing houses and stockyards of these cities that I feel I am familiar with them. Philadelphia, however, is my home, and the little local abattoir in which the beef, pork and mutton consumed in that city are prepared, has given me a very good idea of what a real stockyard and packing house could do in the way of producing filth, with all the attendant evils of flies, disease germs, obnoxious smells, etc.

Will Affect Tourist Trade. Of course this is a matter with which the people who live the year-round in El Paso and who own property here must settle for themselves. If those of us who come here for health or recreation or, as I do, to escape the zero weather of the north Atlantic coast, find the smells which may originate in the stockyards in El Paso, we can go to Phoenix or Tucson or we can go to San Antonio or Corpus Christi.

There is one matter, however, on which I would like enlightenment. If you have referred to the necessity for feed lots in this desert country? In other words, if cattlemen's or stockyard's parlance, what is a feed lot when taken in connection with a stockyard or a packing house?

J. D. Jackson.

El Paso, Texas, Dec. 3, 1914.

But One of Many.

Mr. Jackson, the writer of the foregoing letter, has raised one question in a new form which has been alluded to but very briefly by the cattlemen's press and which Mr. Jackson refers to him. That is the question of the effect of stockyards and packing houses located within the city limits upon one of El Paso's greatest assets, viz: the winter tourist trade. Up to this time thousands of people like Mr. Jackson have elected to spend their winters in El Paso, in order to escape "rigors of the climate" of their northern homes. They have come here to enjoy the benefits of El Paso's sunny skies and her pure air. If that air is to be defiled and the tourists do not like it, they will go elsewhere. As Mr. Jackson says, farther west, to Tucson or Phoenix, or farther east, to San Antonio or Corpus Christi. Will their loss, however, be fully compensated for by the erection of a $75,000 stockyard within the city limits?

That is a question for the citizens, through their city government, to decide.

What Feed Lots Are. With regard to Mr. Jackson's query as to "feed lots" in connection with stockyards, while it is a question that all cattlemen understand it may be there are others of the general public, like Mr. Jackson, who would like to know what feed lots are and what they do.

Feed lots are a set aside by stockyards organizations in close connection, if possible, with the shipping yards in order that cattle brought to the market for sale may be placed therein to be fed if the owner so desires while they are being held for better prices. These lots should be commodious. The Cattle Raisers' Stockyards association has believed that 100 acres would be required for feed lot purposes.

Why They Are Necessary. It often happens that ranchmen send their cattle to a market because of constantly decreasing food supply upon their ranges owing to droughts. Upon reaching El Paso, for example, they might find a declining market. Without feed lots they would be compelled to sell at any price offered. With feed lots their cattle could be fed at a minimum cost while waiting for a rise. This would not be possible in the absence of ample acreage and is one of the strongest reasons why stockyards and feed lots should be outside the city limits.—Advertisement.
